

SECTION XV | AUTHENTICATION REQUIREMENTS

Members of the general public do not require a username or password to access information that is generally available to the public. For information that is accessible to individuals or entities beyond general public access, users must be authenticated to verify their role and associated access levels. Users must subscribe to the access system and provide information to verify their identity. Users are then assigned a login account. At a minimum, users accessing records and information beyond general public access must have a username and password and have the ability to change their password using self-service within the web-based application.
